Jewish War Veterans Will Be There If U.S. Nazi Speaks In New York On May Day

If George Lincoln Rockwell persists in his plan to make a speech in Union Square in New York on May Day he will run into a mass rally of the Jewish War Veterans, Theodore Brooks, State Commander of the J. W. V. warned. The wisdom of the planned counter-demonstration was challenged by a representative of the Anti-Defamation League, says the New York Herald Tribune, although the League agreed with the veterans that Mr. Rockwell, self-styled commandant of the American Nazi party, should not be permitted to speak.

This view was challenged by the American Civil Liberties Union, which insisted that Mr. Rockwell or any one else has "the right to get up and talk."

The clash of opinion occurred on the television panel show, "Between the Lines," which was aired over WNTA (Channel 13). The subject of the program was the recent decision by the Appellate Division, which upheld Mr. Rockwell's legal right to make his planned talk at Union Square, May 1.

Mr. Brooks said the J. W. V. planned to appeal the Rockwell decision to the United States Supreme Court if necessary to block his appearance. He said:

"Rockwell's appearance is calculated and designed to create disorder. Why did he pick Union Square? That's where many persons of Jewish faith congregate. They will be subjected to vituperation as he spouts his Nazi precepts."

Samuel K. Fraenkel, attorney for the American Civil Liberties Union, defended the Appellate court decision. Mr. Fraenkel said:

"You can't deny a person a right to speak because of the character of remarks he is likely to make. He has the right to get up and talk. When he does talk and if he advocates crime and incites a riot then he can be arrested."

Arnold Forster, who represented the Anti-Defamation League, said the Civil Liberties Union's stand was a question of saying "subvert a little and then arrest," reports the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Forster, who also challenged the court decision, was supported by Assemblyman Irwin Brownstein, Democrat, of Brooklyn, who said:

"Rockwell will undoubtedly cause a riot. He's already done it and to permit him to appear would endanger both public health and safety."

In January three thousand enraged, egg-throwing citizens in the usually placid city of Boston, Mass., sent George Lincoln Rockwell and eighteen of his swastika-sporting disciples scamparing back to the relative safety of their Arlington, Va., "national headquarters."

The uniformed "troopers," as they like to call themselves, and their forty-year-old leader had planned a well-publicized invasion of Boston to promote their neo-Nazi party, called the American Nazi Movement. As a target of strategic importance, the invaders had selected a movie house where the picture "Exodus" was playing to a packed reserve-seat audience. The picture concerns the Israeli fight for freedom.

They had intended to picket the theater under the military leadership of Rockwell, who had trouble with the police in both Washington and New York. Thirteen of his young troopers wearing khaki uniforms and red, white, and black swastika armbands, had a few troubles of their own on the way up and never did get to demonstrate with their leader.

In fact, neither did the leader. Five other young Nazis flew to Boston with him, but when they saw the massed crowds along Tremont and Stuart in downtown Boston, they decided discretion was the better part, etc.

Rockwell felt the same way and asked the police to escort him to safety. Thirteen others of the invasion force had their mobilization plans rudely shifted, says the New York Herald Tribune. Their rented truck broke down five times on the northern trip, one beardless youth explained, when questioned at the Fourth Division Police Station there.

At nightfall they were scheduled to depart the same way they had arrived, but this time without wearing swastikas ("Take those arm-bands off," a police officer ordered in the squadroom of the Fourth.)

The Boston police treated them to free photographs at the expense of the municipality and also provided a free escort out of town "at their own request," as one official explained with a grin. At the city limits the unlucky thirteen driving back in their enclosed truck were scheduled to be picked up by state police protectors on down to the Connecticut border where the local constabulary had been alerted.

The entire affair, supposedly conducted on militaristic lines, got off to a bad start on the way north when the truckload of troopers got lost and had to stop at a car wash in suburban Boston to phone their leader. He wasn't there right then, at about 2:30 p.m., but instead had become lost in the crowd himself.

A policeman who didn't recognize the muffled-coated man that all the fuss was about had pushed Rockwell into the crowd lining the sidewalks opposite the Saxon Theater. With many Jewish survivors of concentration camps in the group, it wasn't long before he was spotted, says the New York Herald Tribune. A police wedge broke into the crowd and hustled him out after Rockwell had taken quite a pushing-around.

Without even the opportunity to show off his flashy uniform with its Gestapo-style color decorations, the leader was led through an alley, and according to some reports, was taken into the side door of the theater he had traveled 500 miles to picket. He was taken out the back, and into a waiting police cruiser, then to the police station where he was detained for two and a half hours by Boston police and members of the state police anti-subversive squad.

A few of the escorting officers got the worst of it, egg splashes and all, before escaping with their unwelcome troublesome visitor. Another police car had been tailing the leader's lost flock. At about 3 o'clock an order went out over the police radio in a raspy voice: "Want that truck at Station Four. If the driver has any questions, tell him their leader is there. Take them to their leader."

The thirteen "troopers" ranging in age from twenty-two to thirty-five, arrived minutes later and were escorted into the yellow brick squad room. They were cocky all the way, explaining to news-men and anyone else they could buttonhole that Hitler was misunderstood about exterminating the Jews. Several claimed to be U.S. paratrooper and Navy veterans while most admitted that they had had trouble with the folks at home and had gone off to live at Arlington "headquarters."

They were taken in one by one for brief questioning but no fingerprints were made and no charges preferred, says the New York Herald Tribune. In the meanwhile, those "troopers," bored by the proceedings, clustered at the barred windows of the ground-floor room where they traded insults with a half dozen youths on the sidewalk outside.

"Give me your name and address, Jew," said one of the young

Brandt Says Young Germans Alone In Israeli Work Unpaid

In one of the most unusual confrontations of post-war history, a group of Jewish leaders listened intently, says the New York Herald Tribune, to an address by one of the most powerful politicians in West Germany, at Theodor Herzl Institute, 515 Park Avenue, New York. The speaker was Willy Brandt, Mayor of West Berlin and a strong candidate for the chancellorship of his country in Germany's September elections.

"The terrible crimes which have been committed against millions of Jews in the name of the German people cannot be blotted out," said Mr. Brandt, "not by good will, nor by restitution and indemnification. The world we live in is and will always be burdened by them."

"This, however, does not mean we can bear this past better by continuously pointing out to every single person his own share of responsibility or guilt. . . . Denazification of millions which was carried out during the first post-war years — a result of the shock and disgust over what had happened — failed."

He asked his audience to trust his country and help it to find a new beginning. Deploping "unjustified mistrust," he pleaded that "the truly innocent younger generation should not be weighed down by the sins and derelictions of their fathers."

Concerning the impending trial of Adolf Eichmann in Israel on war crimes charges, says the New York Herald Tribune, Mr. Brandt conceded that there might be similar Germans still at large but said that such "shadows" of the past have no real connection with the West Germany of today. He admitted that there is still anti-Semitism in his country, but insisted that "its basis has grown thin."

He spoke in glowing terms of the "young and brave state of Israel" and assured his listeners that it has the admiration and respect of the German people because of its pioneering spirit and unswerving determination to maintain its existence.

"Israel stands in the same camp that we do in the present struggle between East and West," he said. "The fact that it is a Jewish state is not even particularly important."

He pointed out that many young Germans have gone to Israel to work in collective communities (kibbutzim) without pay and that this is known in Germany as "Operation Atonement." This sort of activity, he felt, is as important in restoring friendly relations between the two peoples as "the sums of money paid to Israel" in material restitution, says the New York Herald Tribune. Mr. Brandt's talk with the Jewish group was his last public appearance of a nine-day visit to the United States.

Many West Germans remain Nazis at heart despite efforts of the country's political leaders to

Theorist Praised At 80 By Labour, Socialist Figures, At Home And Abroad

Raphael Abramovitch, a leading theorist of democratic socialism, who was a leader of the Russian Social Democratic (Menshevik) party and a long-time member of the presidium of the Socialist (Second) International, was honored at a testimonial luncheon at the Roosevelt Hotel, in New York, in commemoration of his eightieth birthday, says the New York Times. He has lived in the United States since 1940, writing and lecturing in behalf of socialism, but against totalitarian communism.

Among those who sent congratulatory messages were: George Meany, president of the American Federation of Labor and Congress of Industrial Organizations; Norman Thomas, the American socialist leader, and Jacob S. Potofsky, general president of the Amalgamated Clothing Workers of America; Premier Viggo Kampmann, of Denmark; Erich Ollenhauer, chairman, and Fritz Heine, secretary, of the Social Democratic party of West Germany; and Giuseppe Saragat and Angelica Balabanoff, leaders of the Socialist Democratic party of Italy.

Congratulations also were sent by the Socialist International, from London; the United Socialist party of France, the Socialist party of Austria, and the Social Democratic party of Denmark.

Mr. Meany's message said, in part: "Not only Russian workers but American labor and freedom-loving people everywhere are greatly indebted to Raphael Abramovitch for the deep conviction, unshakable courage and boundless devotion and energy he has shown throughout his lifetime fight against Capitalist despotism and Communist dictatorship."

U.A.R. Bars U.S. Guild Group From Cairo Because Tour Included Tel Aviv

Plans to present a touring American Theatre Guild Company in Cairo in April were dropped because United Arab Republic authorities objected to the fact that the troupe had included a visit to Tel Aviv on its itinerary.

Tentative arrangements had been made to book the group, led by Helen Hayes, into the Cairo Opera House April 1, 2 and 3 for the showing of three American plays, says the New York Times. The performances were hailed as the first major American cultural attraction to be offered in Egypt in several years and authorities in Cairo at first welcomed the visit enthusiastically.

United States officials announced that the company, which is traveling under State Department auspices, would visit Beirut instead of Cairo, thus eliminating the only booking scheduled for the African continent.

The visit of American players would have given Cairo its first opportunity to see Thornton Wilder's "The Skin of Our Teeth," Tennessee Williams' "The Glass Menagerie," and William Gibson's "The Miracle Worker."

United States officials became concerned during a recent visit of the Louis Armstrong band. The band had been booked into a downtown theatre and all tickets sold. Only a few hours before the opening performance the Ministry of Culture and National Guidance raised a question about Mr. Armstrong's standing with Zionists.

His managers were asked about reports that the jazz musician was "pro-Zionist" and had contributed to funds for Israel. The reports, it was said, had been spread, among others, by the Amman radio in Jordan.

Egyptian authorities at first demanded that the performance be cancelled unless Mr. Armstrong agreed to turn over all proceeds to Arab refugees in Palestine, says the New York Times. However, the band leader cleared himself of the charges to the satisfaction of the Egyptians and the performance went ahead as scheduled.

To avoid complications later, United States officials then asked the Egyptian ministry if difficulties might arise over the American theatre troupe's visit to Israel after appearances in Cairo. After a few days, the United States Embassy representative was advised that such a schedule would be "not acceptable."

The United Arab Republic contends it is still in a state of war with Israel and maintains a policy of shunning all relationships with Israel.

Later it was suggested that the troupe's itinerary might be altered so that the company would not travel to Tel Aviv directly from the Egyptian capital. The reply was that this also would be "unacceptable" as long as a visit to Israel on the same tour was contemplated.

Elaborate preparations for the repertory company's visit had been made, since this was the State Department's first effort to offer Cairo an attraction comparable to recent cultural offerings by other countries, including the Soviet Union.

The Soviet Union recently sent in units of the Bolshoi Ballet and Soviet Armenian dancers. Yugoslavia sent Cairo its impressive Belgrade State Opera.

There has been no important theatre group in Cairo, since the invasion of Suez in 1956. Before that such notable companies as the Comedie Francaise and the British Old Vic found Cairo an excellent "theatre town."

First Mesita Of Canada Wants Help To Repair Fire Damage

The fire in the Synagogue of the First Mesita of Canada Jewish Talmudical College, broke out on the eve of the Sabbath, on October 14, 1960, at one o'clock, on the last day of the Festival of the Rejoicing of the Law (Simchat Torah). No one was present in the building at the time. The fire started in the building near the Holy Ark, containing eleven sacred Torah scrolls, and all their ritual accoutrements, which were destroyed in the conflagration.

The Fire Department was able to salvage only a little of the many holy articles in the synagogue, which included a library of hundreds of valuable, ancient, classical Jewish writings; private members' ritual prayer shawls and phylacteries; as well as the seats, tables, and benches for the worshippers and for the students of the Rabbinical College.

The Torah Scroll (in Hebrew known as Sefer Torah; plural form, Sifrei Torah) is the holiest object in the Jewish religion; second only to a human being. Even if a Torah Scroll should accidentally fall on the ground, the congregation is obliged, by Jewish law, to fast for one day. The destruction of a Sefer Torah is a tragedy to the whole Jewish world, and the remains are buried in the cemetery, with full mourning ceremony. The Sefer Torah contains the Holy Scriptures in scroll form, and the words are written by hand by a Scribe (in Hebrew, Sofer). It has an embroidered satin covering. From its upper arms is suspended the Breast-Plate and mounted on each of the upper arms are the Bells or the Crown.

The flames utterly destroyed several of the Sifrei Torah and ruined the remainder. The holy Ark containing them was burned down to the ground and with it its beautiful curtain. The Torah Scrolls, their individual Breast-Plates, Coverings, Crowns and Bells, and the Curtain of the Ark were presented to the First Mesita of Canada by donors from all over the world and had been handed down through generations of communities, many now non-existent, in Europe. Their value, in terms of spiritual worth and rich historical associations, cannot be estimated, and their loss is irreplaceable.

The First Mesita of Canada now has students from the United States and England as well as a group of refugee children from the Hungarian Revolutionary war. During the weeks following the fire, classes were completely disrupted due to the loss of textbooks and absence of study facilities. They were forced to rent classrooms in other schools and of course were obliged to borrow textbooks. The First Mesita of Canada was founded in 1948 by the Chassidic leader, the Klausenberger Rebbe, Shlita, and the Dean of the College is Rabbi S. A. Unadler, of Montreal. It is now conducting an Emergency Fire Appeal for help.

CREDITS

As soon as most TV shows end, most of you dash off to the kitchen — or somewhere else! We think this is a pity, personally, because if you waited you would see our name on your TV screen.

We're responsible for the musical arrangements on "Country Hoedown" and "Club C", and last summer we did the same job on "While We're Young". Since we like publicity, we're sorry you miss it in the rush to put the coffee percolator on the boil.

But apart from television work, we are available for all kinds of events within the community. We've got the best musicians and singers available. Why not call us?

Council Of Federations And Welfare Funds Reports $128 Million For 1960

Jewish federations, welfare funds, and community councils raised a total of $128 million in 1960 for local, national, and overseas Jewish needs, the Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds reported in an annual review of Jewish communal services just published. In addition, some $35 million was raised by non-local agencies outside of the welfare fund allocations; another $24 million came from non-contributor sources such as earnings, fees, subscriptions, and investments, and $41 million was realized from the sale of Israel bonds.

These sums add up to a quarter of a billion dollars per year. Included in the figures are the incomes of the federations and welfare funds and national and overseas service organizations. They do not include non-contributed income of local service programs. The sum raised by the 216 member agencies of the Council, $128 million, compares with $130.7 million raised in 1959, a drop of 1.6 per cent. It represents an increase, however, of 3.8 per cent over 1958 when the federation campaigns totalled $123.3 million.

These and other figures are included in the annual CJFWF survey entitled, "Jewish Communal Services: Programs and Finances," prepared by S. P. Goldberg, director of budget research for the CJFWF. It summarizes major developments in Jewish communal services and analyzes the programs and finances of leading Jewish agencies.

The total raised by federation campaigns since the end of World War II (1946-1960) has exceeded $2 billion, the survey notes. These funds were contributed by more than 1,000,000 donors and were distributed to hundreds of local service agencies, national organizations, and overseas agencies. Tens of thousands of volunteer workers were involved in the campaigns.

The largest single beneficiary of these campaigns was the United Jewish Appeal which received more than 90 per cent of its income from them. Its share of the 1959 total amount, budgeted (the most recent year for which complete figures are available) came to 61.6 per cent. This amounted to $44.6 million from cities other than New York; it received an additional $18.5 million from the Greater New York UJA campaign. Complete returns for 1960 are expected to show that the UJA received approximately 60 million from the federated campaigns.

American Jewish philanthropic agencies had about $98.5 million available for total overseas Jewish needs in 1959. This compares with $92 million in 1958. About four-fifths of the total was used for philanthropic programs in Israel; the balance mainly in North Africa and Europe.

The total income from the sale of Israel bonds was over $470 million in the ten years from 1951 through 1960. Of this sum, over $400 million worth of bonds was sold in the United States.

Thirteen overseas agencies other than the United Jewish Appeal showed an income of $24.5 million in 1959 compared with $22.8 million in 1958. The largest sum was raised by Hadassah, $9.7 million. The Israeli Institutions of higher learning, Weizmann Institute, Hebrew University, and Technion, raised about $7.4 million in America in 1959. In addition, all three institutions received grants from the Jewish Agency for Israel, a beneficiary of the UJA, and from the Israel government.

Local services received over $32 million from central communal sources in 1959 for operating purposes, compared with $30.5 million the year before. All local fields of service except refugee aid shared the increase in allocations. National agencies had receipts of $60 million in 1959, including $5.7 million from federation and welfare fund campaigns. The five major national Jewish community relations agencies and the National Community Relations Advisory Council received over $7.4 million, compared with $6.9 million received in 1958, a rise of 7 per cent.

The national Jewish hospitals received more than $10.4 million in 1959 but only a fraction of this figure ($132,600) came from the federations and welfare funds. Some fifteen cultural agencies raised over $16 million in 1959, about $638,000 of which came from federation allocations. National religious agencies had receipts of $24.4 million and national service agencies had receipts of $1.7 million during the same period.

Selected portions of the survey will be included in the 1960 edition of the "American Jewish Yearbook."

The Council of Jewish Federations and Welfare Funds is the national association of 216 united Jewish fund-raising and welfare agencies. These central communal organizations, representing over 95 per cent of the total Jewish population of the United States and Canada, annually raise the bulk of all American Jewish philanthropic funds for local, national, and overseas Jewish needs. The Council provides central services for its member agencies in fund-raising, community organization, budgeting, planning for health and welfare services, personnel recruitment, and campaign publicity and community interpretation.

THEORIST PRAISED AT 80

David Dubinsky, president of the International Ladies Garment Workers Union, was chairman, says the New York Times. The sponsors included several labor and socialist organizations, some of them Yiddish. Mr. Abramovitch contributes to The Daily Forward, a Yiddish-language newspaper, in New York.

Mr. Abramovitch was born in Russia in 1880 and joined the Menshevik party in 1899. He took an active part in the Russian Revolution, but was forced to leave the Soviet Union in 1920 because of his opposition to Lenin and other Bolshevik leaders. From 1920 to 1933 — when Hitler came to power — he wrote and lectured in Germany for the Social Democrats. From Germany he went to France, where he carried on similar activities until the Nazis occupied the country in 1940.

He lives at 511 West 113th Street with his wife, Mrs. Rosa Abramovitch, who also sat on the dais at the luncheon. Their daughter, Dr. Leah Andler, who lives in Paris, arrived with her sons, Daniel, 14, years old, and Martin, 9, to be at the testimonial.

Actually, Mr. Abramovitch was 80 years old last July 21. However, he refused to take part in a birthday celebration until he had completed his latest book, "From Socialist Utopia to Totalitarian Tyranny," which covers events in the Soviet Union from 1917 to 1939, says the New York Times. He is co-editor of an anti-Soviet analytical journal, "The Socialist Courier," published in Russian.

Nazis. The police put a stop to that and the group was lined up to sign statements releasing the city from any possible lawsuits and admitting that they had been detained "for my own safety."

The group sprang to rigid attention when a small dark-haired emissary came out from the captain's office to order: "The Commander has given orders that no trooper will speak to reporters." Three minutes later the troopers were back speaking to the reporters, but insisting that their names be spelled right.

Jewish leaders who had written and wired to their organizations to stay away from the "Exodus" picketing were in evidence at the station house.

strengthen democracy, an American-based Jewish organization reported at Bonn recently. The organization, the Anti-Defamation League of B'nai B'rith, said West Germans with Nazi sympathies were "fearful of discovery and therefore tend to refrain from overt expression of their views."

The observation was made in the report of a League delegation sent to West Germany last year in the wake of an international wave of swastika-daubing and anti-Semitic incidents in late 1959 and 1960, says the New York Times. The delegation found that West German Government leaders and officials were vigorously pro-democratic and against anti-Semitism.

But the Germans had twelve years of indoctrination under Hitler's Government and this cannot be wiped out only fifteen years after Hitler's fall, the report said. Some of Hitler's supporters were only nominal members of his party, others have since had a change of heart, but many are still "Nazis at heart," the report said.
